

not bomb out news with Dow

Raymon F. Roß, Director of Dow Recruitment, suggested that demonstrators should direct their ire against the policy-makers who are directing the war. Dow is only fulfilling a contract."

Most students on campus agree with Mr. Barbee that the Placement Office is supplying a valuable service to the students.

Chet Hochbaum, a Math major, added that "by preventing entrance of Dow interviewees, the protesters are doing a disservice to students of this university." Many students agree with the CWRU Placement Office's contention that those students who want to work for a certain company have a right to do so. CWRU, they feel, should protect this right.

"By giving in to protesters, the university would be setting them up as a censorship board for all recruiting companies. This is an infringement of student rights," added Shari Rose, a Mather junior. Most students agreed with her that SDS, MDS, and other dissident groups have no right to impose their political views on campus without everyone's assent.

Campus consensus is that Dow has a right to recruit on equal terms with other companies on this campus, unhampered by the SDS.

Dean Leiken moves to reform restrictions on budding barristers

Earle J. Leiken, Assistant Dean of the Law School, explained recent changes passed by the faculty on an experimental basis to revitalize the graduate law program.

These include lowering the minimum grade point average required for graduation to 1.667, setting up a Pass/No Credit option for second and third year students, accepting students chosen by the Student Bar Association to hold seats on faculty committees, and approving a 12 hour clinical program for second and third year students.

The new grade point average of 1.667 is required for graduation and maintaining good academic standing. It replaces a system whereby the student had to meet a minimum requirement for each semester on a rising scale. Thus a student who had maintained a 1.8 average for his first year, could flunk out after 2 full years of law school. This change will benefit those second and third year students, for example, with a 1.8 accumulative average, who are currently on probation.

The law school has also implemented a new experimental pro-course per year on a Pass/No credit basis. "The purpose of the 'P/NC' is to allow lessening of pressure in some courses. The student will be able to read and pursue his interests without worrying about his grade," said Mr. Leiken. One unusual feature of this program is that if the student passes the course with a D- or better, he will receive passing credit from the Registrar. However, if he fails the course, this will not be indicated on his transcript, nor will the failing grade be averaged into his GPA. Furthermore, the professor will not know which students are registered in a course for P/NC.

Students in the Law School are now taking an active part in the decision making process as members of the faculty committees on Admissions and Financial Aid, Curriculum, and the Library. The Student Bar Association chooses representatives for these committees, who are not subject to the approval or veto of the general faculty of the law school.

The Law School faculty has also approved a 12 hour clinical pro-

Students, faculty opinions on

Comments and elaborations on the halt of the bombing of North Vietnam were polled recently in a survey of the Reserve campus. Jetse Sprey, professor of sociology, is "very happy over the bombing halt." He doesn't view the administration's action as political. So, "the suspension won't help Humphrey. I don't think anybody on my street in Cleveland Heights will change their vote." Mr. Sprey feels the United States "should fade out of the peace talks in Paris."

"I believe it's an honest attempt to end the war - I don't believe President Johnson would stoop to a political ploy." Such is the opinion of George Rand, treasurer of the CWRU young Republicans and active in local and state Republican affairs. Rand also conjectured, "I don't believe it's going to change the outcome of the election - it's still Nixon."

Vicki Chelkes, a Mather co-ed, feels the halt of bombing "could have come earlier. But, I'll take the President's word that now is the time." She added, "I hope nobody's going to win this war... we (the U.S.) have less of a right to destroy the Vietnamese's country than they do." Adelbert senior, Burt Singerman hails the end of bombing as "an outstanding occurrence, undoubtedly due to the paign. The great halt is Johnson. He doesn't want the person who expansion of the war. win Humphrey. it'll help him gain. University of Chicago. decided to retain the small lots near the dorms for short term pick up and delivery parking only. However, over the summer it was decided that this would be impossible to enforce. Dr. Chamberlain claimed that if this had not been done, "two classes of citizens would have developed." He maintained that one class would pay for the privilege of off street parking (in the new Clarke Tower lot) while the other class would in effect have the same privilege without the cost. As a result, "We put everyone on the same basis. Everyone pays."

Chamberlain also envisioned an end to on street parking on East 115 street, although not in the near future. He stated that plans are vague and that no final decision had been reached but concluded with the remark, "I don't see too much future in street parking in this area." Upon hearing this quote Mr. Davidson stated that he had heard nothing of this proposal and that he would be opposed to it because, "We need every parking space on this campus that we can find."

Finally Mr. Davidson referred to the problem of car thefts on campus.

Council votes for education

The Reserve Chapter of the Students for a Democratic Society was voted a total of $220 on Sunday, Nov. 10 by Adelbert Council. SDS had submitted a budget of $500 to the Joint Executive Board of Mather and Adelbert. This amount was cut to $400 as an outside phone for its new third floor office was deleted from the budget.

Most of the SDS budget will be "devoted to paying for campus speaker's travelling expenses and educational materials for the benefit of the entire campus" noted Sue Streeter, a Mather Senior SDS member. Miss Streeter added that "a hat is passed around during meetings instead of having formal dues and this will help pay for additional administrative expenses
